U.S. Actions: Section 301 Tariffs, Section 232 Tariffs

Section 301 Tariffs on China

A Section 301 investigation determined that China’s acts, policies, and practices related to technology transfer, intellectual property, and innovation are unreasonable and discriminatory.

On January 15, 2020, the United States and China signed a Phase One Economic and Trade Agreement. Under the Phase One deal, the U.S. has suspended some tariff increases (List 4B) and will roll back others (List 4A) in return for what the White House calls “structural reforms and other changes to China’s economic and trade regime.” According to information from the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, the agreement includes provisions on intellectual property, technology transfer, agriculture, currency and expanding trade. It also establishes a dispute resolution system. Find full details of the Phase One Agreement on USTR’s website.

Section 301 Tariff: List 4A & List 4B

On January 15, 2020, USTR issued a Federal Register notice reducing the rate of additional tariffs on List 4A products to 7.5%, effective February 14, 2020. Goods on List 4A were previously subject to a 15% additional tariff effective Sept. 1, 2019. List 4 goods have a cumulative import value of $300 billion.

The 15% tariffs on List 4B are suspended, per a Federal Register notice issued 12/13/19.

New! The exclusion process for items on List 4A is now closed. USTR granted 39 HTS exclusions in March 2020, some of which are product specific and others that cover entire subheadings.

ST&R has extensive experience assisting companies with mitigating the impact of this tariff increase through tariff classification, tariff engineering, first sale, and other methods. Contact us for assistance.

Section 301 Tariff: List 3

List 3 products, with a total import value of $200 billion, are subject to an additional 25% tariff as of 5/10/19. List 3 products originally faced a 10% tariff which was effective from 9/24/18 until they were increased to 25%. The additional tariff on List 3 products is not affected by the Phase 1 deal and will remain at 25%.

New! The exclusion process for List 3 products is now closed. USTR granted 664 HTS exclusions from August 2019 - March 2020. Some of these are product specific and others cover entire subheadings. Additional exclusions may be granted. All exclusions granted will be retroactive to Sept. 24, 2018, and expire August 7, 2020.

Section 301 Tariff: List 2
List 2 products, with a total import value of $16 billion, are subject to an additional 25% tariff as of Aug. 23, 2018. The additional tariff on List 2 products is not affected by the Phase 1 deal and will remain at 25%.

All exclusion requests from List 2 have been reviewed as of October 3, 2019, and 269 HTS exclusions were granted, covering 1,074 individual exclusion requests. 1,795 individual exclusion requests were denied. All granted exclusions are product specific and retroactive to Aug. 23, 2018. They will remain in place for one year after the exclusion determination is published in the Federal Register.

New! In March 2020, a Federal Register notice was released requesting public comment on possible further modifications to remove duties from medical care products needed to address the COVID-19 outbreak. Comments will be accepted at least until June 25, 2020.

Section 301 Tariff: List 1
List 1 products, with a total import value of $34 billion, were subject to an additional 25% tariff as of July 19, 2018. The additional tariff on List 1 products is not affected by the Phase 1 deal and will remain at 25%.

All exclusion requests from List 1 have been reviewed and 730 HTS exclusions were granted, covering 3,653 individual exclusion requests. 7,161 individual exclusion requests were denied. Some granted exclusions are product specific and others cover entire subheadings. All exclusions granted are retroactive to July 6, 2018, and remain in place for one year after the exclusion determination is published in the Federal Register.

New! In March 2020, a Federal Register notice was released requesting public comment on possible further modifications to remove duties from medical care products needed to address the COVID-19 outbreak. Comments will be accepted at least until June 25, 2020.

Some exclusions have been extended for the first (Dec 2018 - Dec 2019), second (March 2019 - March 2020) and third (April 2019 - April 2020) sets of exclusions released.

The fourth set of exclusions is set to expire May 14, 2020. USTR is accepting public comment between March 12 and April 12 on extending those exclusions for another year.

The fifth set of exclusions is set to expire June 4, 2020. USTR is accepting public comment between April 1 and April 30 on extending those exclusions for another year.

Section 301 Investigation of France's Digital Services Tax

On July 10, 2019, USTR initiated an investigation with respect to the Digital Services Tax (DST) under consideration by France. On December 2, 2019, USTR completed the first segment of its investigation and produced a report concluding that France's Digital Services Tax is unreasonable, discriminatory, and burdens U.S. commerce.

USTR is proposing additional duties of up to 100 percent on certain French products, and the option of imposing fees or restrictions on French services. It is unclear when these measures may take effect. They have issued a Federal Register notice soliciting comments on the proposed action. The products subject to potential duties are listed in the Annex to the Federal Register notice and on the below product list.
Press reports in January 2020 are citing French officials as saying the U.S. has agreed to postpone these tariffs until at least the end of the year. However, as of February 18, 2020, there has been no official confirmation from the White House.

Section 232 Tariffs on Steel & Aluminum

Effective June 1, 2018, additional tariffs of 25 percent and 10 percent on steel and aluminum imports were imposed for almost all countries. As of May 20, 2019, steel and aluminum products from Canada and Mexico are not subject to the additional tariffs. The following products are covered by these proclamations.
• steel articles classified under HTSUS subheadings 7206.10 through 7216.50, 7216.99 through 7301.10, 7302.10, 7302.40 through 7302.90, and 7304.10 through 7306.90, including any subsequent revisions to these HTSUS classifications

• the following aluminum articles: (a) unwrought aluminum (heading 7601); (b) aluminum bars, rods, and profiles (heading 7604); (c) aluminum wire (heading 7605); (d) aluminum plate, sheet, strip, and foil (flat rolled products) (headings 7606 and 7607); (e) aluminum tubes and pipes and tube and pipe fitting (headings 7608 and 7609); and (f) aluminum castings and forgings (HTSUS 7616.99.5160 and 7616.99.5170), including any subsequent revisions to these HTSUS classifications

New! According to a January 24, 2020 Presidential Proclamation, the tariffs imposed on steel and aluminum will now also apply to the derivatives of aluminum articles and steel articles described in Annex I and Annex II. The additional tariff will be effective February 8, 2020. It will apply to aluminum derivatives from all countries except Argentina, Australia, Canada, and Mexico and steel derivatives from all countries except Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Mexico and South Korea.

Countries and/or companies negatively impacted by these additional tariffs can petition for an exclusion. For assistance in this effort, please contact Kristen Smith at (202) 730-4965.

Section 232 Investigation of Automobiles & Auto Parts

There are currently no tariffs on automobiles or auto parts, and no plans to implement them.

The Department of Commerce announced May 23, 2018 its self-initiation of an investigation under section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 to determine whether imports of automobiles (including SUVs, vans, and light trucks) and auto parts are harming U.S. national security.

The results of the investigation were submitted to President Trump on February 17, 2019. On May 17, 2019, President Trump announced that he would delay a decision for 180 days, making the new deadline November 13, 2019. The Trump Administration missed the November deadline.

The US has been holding talks with the European Union, Japan, and possibly others that will likely seek to reduce imports from those countries. According to the May 17 proclamation, the DOC determined that U.S.-owned auto producers’ share of the domestic and global markets has fallen sharply in recent decades, which decreases the sales revenues that enable the research and development expenditures necessary for long-term automotive technological superiority, which in turn is essential for national defense.

Section 232 Investigation of Uranium

President Trump will not impose tariffs or quotas on uranium imports.

The Department of Commerce announced July 18, 2018 its self-initiation of an investigation under section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 to determine whether the present quantity and circumstances of uranium ore and product imports threaten to impair U.S. national security. In April 2019, the department determined that imports of uranium are threatening U.S. national security.
However, a July 12, 2019 presidential memorandum states that while the report's findings "raise significant concerns...a fuller analysis of national security considerations with respect to the entire nuclear fuel supply chain is necessary at this time." To that end, the memorandum establishes the United States Nuclear Fuel Working Group, but declines to adjust imports through tariffs and quotas.

Section 232 Investigation of Titanium Sponge

New! President Trump will not impose tariffs or quotas on titanium sponge imports.

The Department of Commerce announced March 4, 2019 its initiation of an investigation under section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 into whether the quantity or circumstances of titanium sponge imports into the U.S. threaten to impair national security. This investigation was launched in response to a petition filed by domestic producer Titanium Metals Corporation. In November 2019, the department determined that imports of titanium sponge are threatening to impair national security.

However, a February 27, 2020 presidential memorandum states that actions to adjust imports will not be taken at this time. Instead, a working group will be formed to agree upon measures to ensure US access to titanium sponge for use for national defense or in the event of an emergency. Additionally, the Secretary of Defense will take appropriate action to increase access to titanium sponge and support domestic production capacity of same.

Tariffs on the EU - Aircraft Dispute

On October 2, 2019, the U.S. announced that it will impose additional tariffs of 25 percent on more than 150 products imported from European Union countries, as well as an additional 10 percent tariff on new aircraft from France, Germany, Spain and the United Kingdom, effective October 18, 2019.

New! In February 2020, the U.S. modified the tariffs. Additional products were added to the tariffed list, effective March 5, 2020. Also, the tariff on new aircraft from France, Germany, Spain and the United Kingdom was increased to 15 percent beginning March 18, 2020. The final list of products affected can be found here.

The additional tariffs come after a World Trade Organization arbitrator determined that the U.S. may impose up to $7.5 billion annually in countermeasures against the EU due to its failure to fully comply with a previous WTO ruling against subsidies it provided to aircraft manufacturer Airbus.

Importers with goods on this list should consider taking proactive measures to mitigate the impact of the tariff increase. For assistance in this effort, please contact Kristen Smith at (202) 730-4965.

The EU has published their own preliminary list of U.S. products on which the EU could impose additional tariffs of up to 100 percent as part of this dispute, which you can find here and in the Retaliatory Actions section below.

Tariffs on Mexico (indefinitely suspended)

No additional tariffs related to border security are in effect or are currently scheduled to go into effect.
On May 30, 2019, in an effort to push Mexico to address immigration issues, the White House announced that a 5% tariff would be imposed on goods from Mexico effective June 10, with the rate increasing by 5% each month, up to 25%. On June 7, 2019, President Trump announced that the tariff was “indefinitely suspended” in light of a bilateral agreement to work toward a “durable solution” on “irregular migration” from Mexico to the U.S.
